Inhibition Of Return
Inhibition of Return with Multiple Shifts of Attention [microform] Dodd, Michael D,2005 Inhibition of return IOR refers to the finding that targets at cued locations are responded to more slowly than targets at uncued locations when a relatively long interval occurs between the two events An early and still dominant explanation is that IOR is a mechanism that biases us toward novelty to increase the efficiency of search This idea has rarely been explicitly tested however given a lack of agreement regarding how to measure IOR in search tasks The present thesis uses variations of the multiple cuing paradigm to address two noticeable gaps in the IOR literature relating to visual search These results fit with both attentional and oculomotor accounts of IOR and suggest a strong role for IOR in visual search with its influence increasing as the number of shifts of attention increases Collectively these findings shed considerable light on IOR It appears to be faster acting longer lasting and more pervasive than originally thought Second the magnitude of IOR is greater at more recently cued locations Experiments 4 7 attempted to discriminate two explanations for this pattern decay as a function of time vs interference from intervening cues Across experiments time was held constant and the number of cues preceding target onset was manipulated Counter intuitively the results demonstrated that IOR increased as the number of cues on a trial increased suggesting that IOR might actually increase as attention continually shifts during visual search Accordingly IOR is observed outside of the normal temporal parameters with continual shifts of attention in Experiment 8 First although there is some evidence consistent with IOR influencing visual search there is no explicit evidence that IOR can accrue to a recently attended location if attention is rapidly shifted to new locations every 50 ms the speed at which attention is thought to shift in normal visual search In Experiments 1 3 participants observed cues that were of either a short 50 ms or long 500 ms duration prior to a detection target The results showed that IOR can accrue at up to four locations with multiple rapid shifts of attention quickly enough to facilitate visual search

Attention Addie Johnson,Robert W. Proctor,2004 Attention Theory and Practice provides a balance between a readable overview of attention and an emphasis on how theories and paradigms for the study of attention have developed The book highlights the important issues and major findings while giving sufficient details of experimental studies models and theories so that results and conclusions are easy to follow and evaluate Rather than brushing over tricky technical details the authors explain them clearly giving readers the benefit of understanding the motivation for and techniques of the experiments in order to allow readers to think through results models and theories for themselves Attention is an accessible text for advanced undergraduate and graduate students in psychology as well as an important resource for researchers and practitioners interested in gaining an overview of the field of attention

Attraction, Distraction and Action Charles Folk,Bradley Gibson,2001-11-30 Over the last decade there has been a spate of research on the empirical phenomenon known as attentional capture Interest in capture can be attributed not only to its applied significance but also to the implications of the phenomenon for theories of selective attention as well as cognitive control in general This growing interest however has also spawned a wide variety of experimental paradigms empirical results and theoretical perspectives In June of 2000 40 experimental psychologists converged on Villanova University for a conference and workshop on attentional capture The intent was to provide an intimate forum for scientists from diverse perspectives and backgrounds and using diverse methodologies to present their research on attentional capture and also engage in small group discussions on such key issues as the definition measurement and theoretical treatment of attention capture This book presents a collection of chapters based on those presentations and discussions Chapters are organized around areas such as neuroscience visual cognition developmental individual differences and dynamical systems The volume provides a summary of the latest cutting edge research an important compass for future research in this area a useful survey of the field contributions from internationally recognized experts in attention Due to its exclusive focus on the topic of attentional capture the volume should make an excellent supplemental text or reference book for advanced undergraduate or graduate seminars in cognitive psychology and attention

Inhibition of Return: Neural Basis and Function M. I. Posner,R. D. Rafal,L. S. Choate,J. Vaughan,OREGON UNIV EUGENE DEPT OF PSYCHOLOGY.,1984 A goal of neuropsychology is to connect cognitive functions with underlying neural systems Posner in press has proposed a framework for doing so in which elementary mental operations in cognitive models are expressed in terms of component facilitations and inhibitions in the performance domain These components are in turn linked to underlying neural systems In the area of spatial attention one such component is the tendency to inhibit orienting toward visual locations which have been previously attended inhibition of return The current studies use patients and normals to demonstrate the relationship of this component to systems which generate saccades These mid brain systems appear to contribute specific components to the generation of programs for visual attention The deficits found in patients and the conditions under which the inhibition is found in normals suggest that inhibition of return may function to favor foveation of information at new locations

Inhibition of Return Skye Eva Howard, 2016 Inhibition of return IOR refers to the finding that response times RTs to targets are longer when targets are presented at a recently attended to location relative to targets at new locations The motor based component of IOR was explored by investigating the contributions of M1 to IOR Transcranial magnetic stimulation TMS was used to determine if the mechanisms associated with IOR are represented in M1 Participants completed a cue target task with non predictive exogenous cues It was hypothesized that if the mechanisms underlying IOR are represented in M1 then the motor evoked potentials MEPs associated with the cued or uncued responses would mirror RTs TMS of M1 altered RTs however MEP data did not reveal an effect of cue location on M1 excitability The data indicate a motor contribution to the IOR effect but the question of where in the motor system the mechanisms associated with IOR is localized is unanswered
